Dear friends,

This year, the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics Foundation received the largest private gift in our history: $2 million from Carl Ryden ’89 and his wife, Ashley, to establish the Ryden Program for Innovation and Leadership in Artificial Intelligence.

Carl and Ashley made this gift as a startup investment to inspire students in the NCSSM-Durham residential program, in NCSSM Online, and at the forthcoming NCSSM-Morganton. Yet the vision is even larger: To create an open-source body of knowledge and a community of leaders and learners throughout the state, the country, and even the world to use artificial intelligence ethically in the service of humanity. This means that the program’s resources will be shared with and enhanced by educators and students beyond NCSSM.

Our school was founded to be a leader in STEM education, to identify and invest in the state’s most promising young students, and to do so on behalf of the public. Carl is a prime, but by no means solitary, example of the prodigious return on that investment.
Twenty-five years ago when I began my work with the foundation, NCSSM was a young institution. Our school’s oldest alumni were still in their 30s. Now, so many of them have attained success and, like Carl, are in a position to offer to a new generation an even more generous version of the gift offered to them. As substantial as the investment of the state of North Carolina continues to be in the school’s mission, only private philanthropic dollars like Carl and Ashley’s and those of the donors detailed in these pages have the flexibility to enhance and innovate—to provide world-class labs, classrooms, and opportunities for students.

So I sense that a new era for the school is at hand. There are many millions of dollars in unmet needs at the school. And there are problems facing the world that are complicated and challenging—but they’re not too hard for NCSSM students and alumni.

I hope that the Rydens’ example can inspire other alumni and friends to dream even bigger and give generously to the school, as it gave to them. Thank you for considering and playing your part in this future. May we stand together to meet the greater challenge that rises before us now.

President, NCSSM Foundation
Murray Abramson is the vice president of global clinical operations at Biogen. Previous to this, he held a number of management positions at Merck with increasing responsibility. He has also served on the faculty of the Duke University School of Medicine. Murray holds a bachelor’s in chemistry from Duke University as well as an M.D. from the Duke University School of Medicine.

Brian Bailey is a co-founder and managing partner of Carmichael Partners, a Charlotte-based private investment firm. Prior to forming Carmichael, he worked in private equity at the Carlyle Group, Forstmann Little, and Carousel Capital. Additionally, he previously served in government at the Office of the White House Chief of Staff and the U.S. Small Business Administration. Brian holds a bachelor’s from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and an M.B.A. from the Stanford Graduate School of Business.

Richmond Baker is a senior consultant/architect at Microsoft Corporation in Charlotte. He has also held a number of other positions at Microsoft including program manager, engineer, public sector platforms technology lead, and premier field engineer. Additionally, he has worked as a network engineer for both US West and the United States Air Force and as a consultant for Credence Automation. Richmond holds a bachelor’s in computer science from Colorado Technical University.

Phil Breitfeld is the chief strategy and innovation officer at Champions Oncology, Inc. Prior to joining Champions, Phil was the global vice president at Quintiles, responsible for the Therapeutic Centers of Excellence. He has also led the Oncology Center of Excellence at Quintiles, held senior clinical development positions at Merck KGaA (EMD Serono in the U.S.), and was the associate chief medical officer at BioCryst. Prior to his career in the pharmaceutical industry, Phil held academic positions at Harvard, University of Massachusetts, Indiana University, and Duke University. He was trained in pediatric hematology/oncology at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and received an M.D. from the University of Rochester and a bachelor’s in chemistry from Princeton University.
Deborah “DC” Coleman is the technology principal in the Hi-Tech, Communications, and Media Group at Xerox Corporation. DC previously worked at Ford Motor Company as an engineer, as a financial advisor at Edward Jones, and in several positions in manufacturing and engineering senior management at Nortel Networks. DC holds a bachelor’s in electrical engineering from Duke University and an M.B.A. from Harvard Business School.

Kim Donica is Vice President of Software Quality Assurance for MetLife Insurance. She has over 15 years of information technology experience including management and technology consulting as well as an extensive background leading strategic initiatives for global organizations. Kim holds a bachelor’s from Emory University and an M.B.A. from Georgia State University.

Sean Fahey is a founding partner and chief investment officer of Claren Road Asset Management. Prior to the founding of Claren Road, Sean was a managing director at Citigroup. During his career at Salomon Brothers/Citigroup, he held several roles across global credit trading. In his last role there, Sean was head of global emerging markets external debt trading. He received a bachelor’s in economics from Duke University.

Chris Herrera is the director of client services at PrecisionLender. She has also served as vice president of administration at Topics Education and manager of entrepreneurial advisory services at PwC. Chris holds a bachelor’s from Westminster College, where she was a Presidential Scholar, and an M.B.A. from the University of Texas at Austin.

Brad Ives is the chief sustainability officer and an associate vice chancellor for Campus Enterprises at UNC-Chapel Hill. Brad joined UNC from the North Carolina Department of Environment and Natural Resources, where he served as the assistant secretary for natural resources. He has also served in leadership positions at Davidson River Capital, LLC, Integro Earth Fuels, Inc., Illumination Renewables, and Babson Capital. Brad received his bachelor’s and J.D. from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Henry Kuo is a financial services consultant with AXA Advisors, LLC, where he has worked for 22 years helping clients establish sound financial strategies and goals. He holds a bachelor’s in electrical engineering from NC State University and an M.B.A. from Duke University’s Fuqua School of Business. He has chaired NCSSM’s Board of Trustees, the NCSSM Foundation’s Board of Directors, and the NCSSM Alumni Association.

Karen LeVert is CEO of Southeast TechInventures and COO of Ag TechInventures, Inc., both of which she co-founded as technology innovation labs. Karen has over 25 years of successful leadership experience in startups, technology commercialization, and executive management. She holds an M.B.A. from the University of Dayton and a bachelor’s in information technology from Eastern Michigan University.

Bob Lynch is a managing Partner at Cyber Security Advisory & Implementation Services. He is an entrepreneur and has been involved with several businesses since 1992, most notably as President and CEO at Nitronex Corporation, which was acquired by MACOM Technology Solutions in 2003. Bob is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Society for Microbiology, and the American Chemical Society. He holds a bachelor’s and an M.B.A. from Babson College and a master’s from Tufts University.
Emily Martine is an active community volunteer and a parent of a 2018 NCSSM graduate. She is the 2003 recipient of NCSSM’s Henry Kuo Service Award and a 2018 recipient of the Virginia Wilson Outstanding Volunteer Award and has served as NCSSM Parent Association Communications Secretary and co-chaired the NCSSM Commencement Reception in 2016-2017. She has also served on the NCSSM Alumni Association Board of Directors, as PTA President at five different schools in the U.S. and abroad, and is chair emerita of the NCSSM Parent Association. Prior to leaving the corporate track to raise her family, Emily worked for seven years for GE Capital. She holds a bachelor’s from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Steven Norton is co-head of executive networks, research, and media at Metis Strategy, a management consulting firm that advises Fortune 500 technology executives. He previously was a reporter at The Wall Street Journal, where he covered business and technology with a focus on enterprise IT. Prior to joining WSJ, he helped launch a community for financial professionals at Thomson Reuters and completed business journalism internships at Bloomberg News and The Charlotte Observer. Based in New York, Steven currently serves as president of the NCSSM Alumni Association Board of Directors. He received a bachelor’s from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Todd Roberts is chancellor of NCSSM and an ex officio member of the Foundation Board. He began his education career as a Durham Public Schools teacher and principal. Most recently, he served as superintendent of Ann Arbor Public Schools in Michigan before returning to Durham in 2010 to become NCSSM’s fourth chancellor. He holds a bachelor’s in English from Duke University and a master’s and doctorate in education from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Randy Myer teaches in the M.B.A. and undergraduate business programs at UNC-Chapel Hill. He is also an active local investor and board member, having invested in several startups and venture capital funds, a private equity fund, and three angel groups. He is chair of the board of a startup in the medical device space and NC Idea, a foundation devoted to funding early-stage companies. He is also a board member of the Carolina Research Venture Fund and part of the founding team for the Carolina Angel Network. He received an M.B.A. from Harvard University and a bachelor’s from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Meg Powell has over 15 years of experience in the pharmaceutical industry including assignments at McKinsey, Eli Lilly and GlaxoSmithKline. She is the CEO of TARGET PharmaSolutions. She has also worked with multiple startup companies while at Medgility, a consulting firm focused on strategy and business development of emerging companies. These include Qura Therapeutics, KemPharm, Inc., and most notably, Aerial Biopharma, where she was the interim vice president of corporate development and was instrumental in the sale of ADX-NOS to Jazz Pharmaceuticals. Meg holds a Pharm.D. from UNC-Chapel Hill and an M.B.A. from Stanford University.

Rick Stone is chair emeritus of the Foundation Board, having served as a board member and as its chair, and as chair of the Odyssey Capital Campaign. Prior to his retirement, Rick was an investment banker in New York City after having taught English literature at Boston University. After retiring, he studied and taught biblical literature, earning a M.T.S. from Duke University Divinity School and an M.T. from Harvard University Divinity School. He received a bachelor’s from Princeton University, a master’s in finance from MIT Sloan School of Management, and a doctorate in English literature from Cornell University.
Charlie Stone is a co-founder and partner of Alfreton Capital, an investment fund based in London. Prior to living in London, he was an analyst at Praxient Capital and DUMAC, the endowment manager for Duke University. Charlie graduated from NCSSM in 2003 and has been a member of the Alumni Association Board of Directors since 2009, serving as its president from 2012-2015. Charlie holds a bachelor’s from Princeton University and an M.B.A. from Harvard Business School.

Sara Lou Succop is a shareholder in American Roller Bearing Company. She is a philanthropist and an active community volunteer serving on a variety of boards and councils such as the Burke County Public Schools Foundation, Burke County Public Schools Student Health Advisory Council, Western Piedmont Community College Foundation, and the Hospice of Burke County. Sara Lou holds a bachelor’s from UNC-Chapel Hill and an associate’s in nursing from Western Piedmont Community College.

Clay Thorp is a co-founder and general partner of Hatteras Venture Partners. Clay also serves as executive chairman of PhaseBio Pharmaceuticals and chairman of GeneCentric Diagnostics. He has also been co-founder and CEO and chairman of Synthematix, Inc., co-founder and head of corporate development for Novalon Pharmaceutical Corporation, and co-founder and president of Xanthon, Inc. He holds a master’s in public policy from Harvard University and a bachelor’s in mathematics and art history from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Millie Tan is an independent consultant for TAN Marketing, LLC. Most recently, she was executive vice president and chief marketing officer at Zelis Healthcare. Katie holds a bachelor’s in business management from Virginia Tech.

Leah Englebright is a Certified Public Accountant and is the director of budget and finance at NCSSM, where she oversees the financial reporting of the school. Prior to joining NCSSM, Leah spent seven years in public accounting before becoming the controller at Vance-Granville Community College. Leah holds a bachelor’s from Meredith College and a master’s from NC State University.

STAFF OFFICERS
The Ryden Program for Innovation and Leadership in Artificial Intelligence aims to develop high school leaders not only adept at designing and deploying the powerful technology, but also fluent in the ethical considerations it raises for our society.

“Algorithms help us choose who to be friends with on social media, who to connect with on LinkedIn,” says entrepreneur Carl Ryden ’89, who with his wife, Ashley, made a record $2-million gift to the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics Foundation to launch the program.

“Algorithms tell you what the right answer is on Google, whether it’s the right answer or not. AI is shaping our society in ways I don’t think we begin to understand … We have algorithms shaping history, algorithms shaping politics, algorithms shaping how we interact with one another and how we interact with the world around us.”

The exceptional high school students of NCSSM, who integrate the arts and humanities deeply into their education, he says, are in a prime position to understand and influence how to merge humanity with machine learning—and how to use AI to solve complex, macro problems affecting society.

“They have smart brains and fresh eyes; the world hasn’t told them what’s not possible yet,” he says. “You see the kids here doing amazing things. We absolutely need to build leaders who are capable of driving that future in a way that gets us to a better place as a society, and I think the kids here and the faculty here have earned and deserve the chance to shape that future. I am incredibly humbled I could be a help in that.”

Ryden is co-founder and CEO of Cary, NC-based PrecisionLender, a provider of applied banking insights technology to commercial banks.
worldwide, which includes an AI coach that helps human loan officers work more productively with clients.

Though the standard acronym is AI for “artificial intelligence,” Ryden says, “I think more accurately, it’s IA—which is intelligence augmentation. How do you actually build a system that makes the human better? I think what you’re going to see is that the things that are uniquely human—which are highly complementary to what computers can do—those things are going to become increasingly more valuable: the empathy, the judgment, the understanding. Computers are better than us at math, but there are a lot of things they can’t do. In fact, what you find is that the combination of human and machine produces far better results than either alone. We want to build Iron Man suits, not Terminators.”

The Ryden Program will integrate with multiple disciplines in all of NCSSM’s academic programs, including online classes and residential classes on the Durham, NC, campus and on the Morganton, NC, campus after it opens in 2021. The curriculum will be available online, and its output will also be open-source, ensuring students and educators from around the globe also will benefit from and contribute to it.

Dean of Engineering and Computer Science Joe LoBuglio has been named interim Executive Director of the new program, NCSSM Chancellor Todd Roberts announced, and three to four new hires will be announced soon, including an AI curriculum architect. He said NCSSM is continuing to fundraise for the program.

“We believe that NCSSM is uniquely positioned to address the fundamental questions and challenges presented by AI—particularly related to ethics and entrepreneurship,” Roberts said. “A component of our mission is to ‘inspire innovation for the advancement of humankind,’ with which the Ryden Program squarely aligns. We couldn’t be more thrilled to accept this gift from Carl and Ashley, and our students cannot wait to embrace all that the program has to offer.”

LoBuglio was also enthusiastic about the opportunity and echoed Ryden’s faith in NCSSM students.

“It gives me great optimism to work with these students who are eager and capable to tackle complex issues in a broad variety of disciplines,” he said. “It is not just this one gift but (Ryden’s) ongoing wisdom and guidance that will make this program a success.”

“...what you find is that the combination of human and machine produces far better results than either alone. We want to build Iron Man suits, not Terminators.”
September of 2017 saw one of the most energized—and well-dressed—collections of NCSSM advocates ever gathered under one roof, at the school’s inaugural NC STEM Hall of Fame Gala at the Washington Duke Inn in Durham.

NCSSM community members and leadership joined with corporate and civic leaders to honor four inductees for their remarkable contributions to our state in science, mathematics, engineering, technology, and ethics of service reflective of the mission of NCSSM.

Inducted with standing ovations into the newly established NC STEM Hall of Fame were the Burroughs Wellcome Fund, Maya Ajmera ’85, Joseph DeSimone, Ph.D., and the Honorable James B. Hunt, Jr., former governor of North Carolina.

“Truly, the world is a better place thanks to their good work and leadership.”
The Burroughs Wellcome Fund, represented by President John Burris, was the first honoree. Katie O’Connor, NCSSM’s Vice Chancellor for Academic Programs, spoke of the Fund’s impact on the school and on young scientists throughout the state. “If I could only choose one word to describe the impact of the Burroughs Wellcome Fund,” said O’Connor, “the word I would choose is transformational.”

Ajmera, President & Chief Executive Officer of Society for Science & the Public and the publisher of Science News, followed as the evening’s second honoree. Chancellor Todd Roberts in his introductory remarks noted Ajmera’s contributions. “Maya,” he said, “has helped to transform the nearly 100-year-old Society into a dynamic, entrepreneurial organization.”

DeSimone, co-founder and CEO of Carbon and professor at UNC-Chapel Hill and NC State, was the evening’s third honoree. Valerie Ashby, Dean of Trinity College of Arts & Sciences at Duke University, lauded the high value DeSimone has placed on diversity in STEM fields throughout his career. “If you think about innovation and what drives innovation,” she said, “you realize quickly that diversity is a fundamental tenet of innovation. It’s mathematically substantiated.”

The evening’s most enthusiastic response was reserved for the evening’s last honoree. The Honorable James B. Hunt, Jr., who served as North Carolina’s lieutenant governor for four years and governor for 16, was introduced by Tom Williams, chair of the NCSSM Board of Trustees, who used the occasion to thank Hunt for his vision in establishing NCSSM and his lifelong efforts to improve public education. In accepting the honor, Hunt passionately underscored the importance of education: “Educating our people, growing an economy with good jobs—it’s simply what we must do to make our state as good as it can be!”

The honorees’ influence extends globally, the chancellor emphasized in his closing remarks. “Truly,” Roberts said, “the world is a better place thanks to their good work and leadership.”
“The work they do at NCSSM needs to find its way out into the world. It’s too good, too meaningful, to be kept secret.”

Tessa Mannell ’19 was one of many students who benefitted from the endowment’s support of NCSSM’s Summer Research in Humanities course.

“If we don’t recognize the importance of young people’s interest in areas outside of science and math, we risk a future that has no sense of history, or the power of stories and of days spent walking through woods that were once much more,” Tessa said. “We risk the loss of creativity, compassion, and investigative thought, without which math and science are meaningless.”

Though Tessa will never know the man for whom this endowment is named, she will forever benefit from the legacy that he, and our generous donor, left for her. STEM may be what we’re known for at NCSSM, but the Humanities form who we are.
The classroom and laboratory can be lonely places sometimes. It’s a safe bet that alumni everywhere remember hours spent in solitude, working feverishly to puzzle out a solution to the academic challenge of the day. And, just as certainly, they all found themselves wondering, “Why bother? Will anyone ever even see this, anyway?”

Thanks in part to an endowment established by Brad Ives ’82 and his family, students at NCSSM will always have opportunities to share their work with the world through participation in academic conferences and competitions.

In 2017-2018, NCSSM students once again represented the school on an international stage while winning honors at the Singapore International Mathematics Challenge. The team of seniors Daniel Bae, Emily Wen, and Zack Lee earned a “Distinction” award after a week of fierce competition. The Challenge awards a single champion and 12 Distinction awards, so among 52 schools from nearly 30 countries, NCSSM’s team ranked in the top 13.

“Participation in academic conferences and competitions is an essential experience for many NCSSM students,” said Angela Teachey, NCSSM’s Director of Academic Programs. “The work they do at NCSSM needs to find its way out into the world. It’s too good, too meaningful, to be kept secret.”

WHY I GIVE

“I give to NCSSM as a small token of gratitude for the tremendous impact this school has had on both [of my] daughters, who are alumnae! Giving back to NCSSM … allows us to show our appreciation for all that the state of North Carolina has done to make this opportunity available.

Marcie Carnes, ’14 and ’15 parent
WHY I GIVE

“I decided to give back because NCSSM gave to me. I want future unicorns to have the same once-in-a-lifetime opportunities I had.”

WHY I GIVE

“When you make a gift to NCSSM, your dollar means much more and goes much further. From school dances to athletics to student development sessions on safe and proper social media usage, private gifts to the Foundation support many of the services we are able to provide for students.”

WHY I GIVE

“When we got the invitation to give to the NCSSM Foundation... I thought, ‘If all we can give to help NCSSM is the $50 a month I would have spent on his lunch money at [his home school], then that’s what we’re going to give.’ I just felt like I needed to. He was getting so much from the experience and learning so much and growing so much that it was the least we could do. Truly it was both the least — and the most — we could do. There was never any doubt in our minds that he was where he needed to be, and that he was taken care of. They were the hardest and best years of his life, and we are just grateful.”
